TAU on Netflix

Hercules Film Fund and Rhea Films, with great joy announce that TAU is set to begin streaming on Netflix on June 29th.

Directed by Federico D'Alessandro, "Tau," is a sci-fi thriller starring Maika Monroe, Ed Skrein and Gary Oldman.

"Tau" is written by Noga Landau. Monroe plays a victim who was a street-smart grifter that has been kidnapped and held captive in order to be part of a fatal experiment.

The only thing standing in the way of her freedom is Tau, an advanced artificial intelligence developed by her captor, played by Skrein. Tau is armed with a battalion of drones that automate a futuristic smart house.

Monroe broke out in 2014's "The Guest" and "It Follows" and starred in "Independence Day: Resurgence" last year. Oldman will be seen next in awards contender "Darkest Hour."

The movie is financed by Hercules Film Fund and Ken Kao's Waypoint Entertainment under his first-look deal with Addictive Pictures. David S. Goyer, who wrote the "Dark Knight" trilogy, produced under his Phantom Four banner alongside Russell Ackerman and John Schoenfelder for Addictive Pictures and Kevin Turen.

Rhea Films co-produced the film with Paris Kasidokostas Latsis, Terry Douglas and Jean-Luc De Fanti serving as executive producers along with Ken Kao, Dan Kao and Luc Etienne as executive producers.
